MARKET COMMENTARY

Global equity and fixed income markets declined. Mounting concerns over the durability of the global economic recovery sparked the pullback.

We remain neutral between stocks and bonds. Stock markets have rebounded from March's lows, and while we have a balanced view of the risks facing global markets, equity valuations appear extended. Bond yields are broadly unattractive and anchored at low levels amid strong support from central banks, although attractive idiosyncratic opportunities in certain credit sectors persist. Major central banks and governments delivered significant monetary and fiscal stimulus to help offset the economic impact of the coronavirus pandemic, which has helped to stabilize growth and prop up equity markets. Economic indicators have continued to improve, albeit at a gradual pace, and ultralow interest rates are likely to be a sustainable boon for markets. However, further fiscal stimulus measures, particularly in the U.S., have failed to materialize, and the tailwind from previous measures appears to be fading.

We believe the course of the coronavirus pandemic and the outcome of upcoming U.S. presidential and congressional elections will have a significant impact on the path to a sustainable recovery. While we can envision a scenario in which public health, geopolitical, and idiosyncratic risks abate-creating a favorable environment for growth and risk assets-we are also cognizant of the potential for downside surprises among these myriad risks. On balance, we expect that economic recovery will continue over the next 12 months despite periodic volatility and, therefore, have sought opportunities to lean into risk in measured ways.

We have a balanced view on risk taking within our portfolios as equity market valuations remain extended amid continued volatility and political risks. We believe that our strategic investing approach and broad diversification add value over the long term and could help to mitigate downside risk.
