

QUARTERLY REVIEW Blue Chip Growth Fund

As of March 31, 2024

PORTFOLIO HIGHLIGHTS

The portfolio outperformed both the Russell 1000 Growth Index and the S&P 500 Index during the three-month period ended March 31, 2024.

Relative performance drivers (versus the Russell 1000 Growth Index):

- Security selection in the information technology sector contributed.
- Communication services added value due to stock picks and an overweight position.
- Adverse stock choices in the health care sector detracted.

Additional highlights:

- Our view is that the path of least resistance for markets is to grind higher as we approach the election, given the Federal Reserve's (Fed) dovish assurances and the high likelihood of a supportive earnings backdrop. The primary risk to that scenario is a string of hotter-than-expected inflation prints that force the Fed to dial back the current expectations for rate cuts.
- From a positioning standpoint, we continue to refrain from trying to forecast macro events and remain focused on idiosyncratic growth narratives that we think can play out regardless of the environment at large.

PERFORMANCE REVIEW

Stocks Produce Strong Gains to Start the Year

U.S. stocks produced strong first-quarter gains that lifted several broad indexes to all-time highs. The market was driven by investors' optimism about the corporate profit potential stemming from advances in artificial intelligence (Al). Investors were also encouraged by the outcome of the Fed's most recent monetary policy meeting. Although the central bank kept short-term interest rates steady throughout the quarter, in mid-March policymakers maintained their year-end 2023 "dot plot" projections for three quarter-point interest rate cuts by the end of 2024 despite recent upticks in inflation readings.

Security Selection in the Information Technology Sector Contributed

- The portfolio's position in NVIDIA contributed. Shares traded higher in the first quarter, supported by the company's fourth consecutive beat-and-raise earnings release-despite high expectations. While production has expanded, demand for leading-edge graphics processing units (GPUs) continues to outpace supply as large-scale cloud computing providers race to build out their Al infrastructure. NVIDIA's strong product cadence featuring next-generation GPUs and operating system software should support additional growth in the near term. The chipmaker's dominant position in state-of-the-art GPUs, combined with its embedded software, has created an expanding moat behind which it should be able to continue to innovate and grow earnings.
- Our underweight allocation to Apple added value. Shares fell after management lowered guidance for near-term revenue growth as the company braces for continued weakness in China due to competitive pressures and macro headwinds. Antitrust litigation and the looming threat of potentially losing massive payments from Google to be the preferred search engine on the iPhone has also put pressure on the stock. We maintain an underweight position relative to the benchmark due to concerns over saturation and elongation of replacement cycles for smartphones and Apple's ability to grow its services segment enough to sustain high levels of growth.

Communication Services Added Value Due to Stock Picks and an Overweight Position

Shares of Meta Platforms continued their run of outperformance during the period as strong return on advertising spending drove demand, while forward-looking guidance suggested continued acceleration in the months ahead supported by improving engagement and monetization trends-particularly in short-form video-along with Al-enabled advertising campaign tools. The company also instituted a dividend and expanded its share repurchase program, which was well received. Meta is one of two leading platforms that we expect to benefit from a multi-decade transition from offline to online advertising and offers investors a rare combination of scale, growth, and profitability at an attractive valuation with multiple catalysts that include a collection of under-monetized surfaces and social commerce initiatives.

Favorable Security Choices in the Consumer Discretionary Sector Assisted

Oursignificant position in Amazon.com added value as the company's continued improvement in retail operations in the fourth quarter led margins in the segment to the highest level since 2019. Investors also responded positively to Amazon's accelerating revenue growth and guidance for continued strength across all segments throughout 2024. Amazon has three businesses (e-commerce, Amazon Web Services, and advertising) that each are levered to durable secular growth themes, are attacking huge addressable markets, and have plenty of runway left for growth. Amazon also continues to reinvest profits into other segments like devices and video, which should bode well for future growth and enhance the overall value proposition of its expanding ecosystem.

Adverse Stock Choices in the Health Care Sector Detracted

- Shares of UnitedHealth Group came under pressure due to a string of events, including higher-than-expected medical costs due to respiratory illness season and increased inpatient activity, lower-than-expected initial Medicare Advantage (MA) rates for 2025, an antitrust investigation by the U.S. Department of Justice, and a data breach at one its subsidiaries. We believe that UnitedHealth Group's ability to provide durable growth is underappreciated by the market, and we view the company as well positioned, thanks to its leadership in the fast-growing Medicare Advantage market, as well as its Optum business, which captures a larger share of health care spending by providing services like value-based care delivery, analytics, and prescriptions in a cost-effective manner that results in better outcomes for patients.
- Shares of Humana traded lower early in the period as investors reacted negatively to growing headwinds for the managed care company's MA business, including worsening utilization trends, decelerating membership growth, and lower-than-expected initial MA rates for 2025.

PORTFOLIO POSITIONING AND ACTIVITY

Keeping in line with recent trends, fundamentally driven trading activity (trading focused on company fundamentals and/or valuation as opposed to trades made for cash generating or rebalancing purposes) continues to be light; however, we did add some exposure to a handful of attractive opportunities on the margins. There were no fundamentally driven sales during the period.

Information Technology

Information technology remains our largest weight. Within the sector, we focus on innovative business models that can take advantage of transformational change. We favor companies with durable business models that address large and growing markets, including semiconductors and semiconductor equipment, public cloud computing, software, and consumer technology.

We added shares of TE Connectivity, a market-leading provider of connectors and sensors. We view the company as attractively valued at current levels, and we appreciate its leverage to the proliferation of both AI and electric vehicles over the coming years, which should be supportive of structurally higher growth over the long term.

Consumer Discretionary

We remain constructive on stock-specific opportunities within the consumer discretionary sector. We are focused on businesses benefiting from the secular shift of consumer spending to online retail, as well as select companies that stand to gain from growing demand for electric vehicles. Additionally, within the sector, we have select exposure to off-price retail and fast-casual dining, as well as businesses that we feel are positioned to take advantage of the long-term growth in online travel services.

We added to our stake in Carvana, a disruptor in used autos. While we remain cautious around Carvana's recovery path, concerns regarding its liquidity profile have moved to the rear view, and recent execution by company management-as Carvana turns its focus toward profitable growth-has instilled more confidence.

Energy

Our limited exposure to the energy sector generally consists of high-quality exploration, production, and services companies that demonstrate an ability to generate cash flow and effectively allocate capital.

Schlumberger is a global leader in oil field services with a revenue mix that primarily skews international. We added to our position in the company, which is widely regarded as a technology leader in oil field services, as we expect Schlumberger to be a primary beneficiary of the international and offshore capital expenditure upcycle on the back of decreasing oil drilling productivity and a steepening cost curve onshore.

Utilities

Our minimal exposure to the utilities sector is focused on businesses that we believe are well positioned to benefit from structural tailwinds that should drive meaningful growth in free cash flow and earnings. In general, the deregulation of the sector, as well as increased environmental restrictions, has dampened the opportunity for companies to achieve sustainable, long-term growth. As technology and regulation evolve, we will continue to monitor utilities in search of firms with the potential to generate sustainable long-term growth.

We continued to add to our stake in Constellation Energy, which is the United States' largest producer of clean, carbon-free energy, as well as a leader in nuclear power and a predominant supplier of energy products and services to homes, businesses, and the public sector. We believe Constellation will likely benefit from margin expansion given our expectations that overall energy prices are likely to rise, while the input costs for nuclear remain unchanged. In addition, increasing AI-related demand for reliable clean power due to growing data center needs represents a significant tailwind for the company.

MANAGER'S OUTLOOK

Our view is that the path of least resistance for markets is to grind higher as we approach the election, given the Fed's dovish assurances and the high likelihood of a supportive earnings backdrop. The primary risk to that scenario is a string of hotter-than-expected inflation prints that force the Fed to dial back the current expectations for rate cuts. That said, from a positioning standpoint, we continue to refrain from trying to forecast macro events and remain focused on idiosyncratic growth narratives that we think can play out regardless of the environment at large.

Net contribution is calculated versus a specific benchmark. It is the difference between the security's absolute contribution to the portfolio and the security's absolute contribution to the benchmark. This reflects the amount the security has impacted relative return.

Past performance is not a reliable indicator of future performance. All numbers are percentages. Analysis represents the total performance of the portfolio as calculated by the FactSet attribution model and is inclusive of other assets. Non-equity positions are excluded from structure shown. Returns will not match official T. Rowe Price performance because FactSet uses different exchange rate sources and does not capture intra-day trading. Performance for each security is obtained in the local currency and, if necessary, is converted to USD using an exchange rate determined by an independent third party. Figures are shown with gross dividends reinvested. Sources: Financial data and analytics provider FactSet. Copyright 2024 FactSet. All Rights Reserved. MSCI/S&P GICS Sectors; Analysis by T. Rowe Price. T. Rowe Price uses the current MSCI/S&P Global Industry Classification Standard (GICS) for sector and industry reporting. Figures are shown gross of fees. Returns would be lower as a result of the deduction of such fees. Performance returns are in USD.
